St. Jago de la Vega, October 23, 1722.

To his Excellency Sir Nicholas Lawes, Kt. Governour of Jamaica.

The humble Address of the Assembly of the said Island.

May it please your Excellency,

WE His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal Subjects, and Assembly of this his Island of Jamaica, do return your Excellency our most unfeigned Thanks for your Speech.

We beg Leave to assure your Excellency, that we shall use our utmost Care and Endeavour to relieve the present Distresses of the poor Inhabitants of this Island, and contribute all in our Power, as dutiful and loyal Subjects, to support and maintain His Majesty's Honour and Dignity, and the Good and Welfare of this Island; and to that Intent, have now under our Consideration the Laws recommended to us by your Excellency, and shall lose no Time in expediting of them.

Past the Assembly,

London, February 22.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from France.

Paris, Feb. 27. The King placing himself on his Seat of Justice the 22d Instant in the Morning at the Parliament House, speaks as follows.

Gentlemen,

I Am come to my Parliament to make known unto you, that according to the Laws of my State, I intend henceforwards to take the Government of it into my own Hands; (and addressing himself to the Duke of Orleans, said to him,) My Uncle, I will never propose to my self any other Glory than the Good of my Subjects, which has been the sole Object of your Regency; 'tis to pursue this Point successfully I desire, that next to my self, you will preside in all my Councils, and that I confirm, by your Advice, the Choice I have already made of the Cardinal du Bois for my First Minister; the Keeper of the Seals shall acquaint you more amply what my Pretensions are in other Respects. When the King had done speaking, he was complimented by the Duke of Orleans, who kneeled down at his Majesty's Feet to pay his Homage, but the King raised him up, and embraced him. Then the Keeper of the Seals having obtained his Majesty's Leave to speak to the Parliament, he expressed himself to the same Effect the King did before. The 23d Instant in the Morning, the Parliament, with the President de Mesmes at their Head, had the Honour to congratulate the King upon his Majority. The Chamber of Accounts, the Court of Aydes, the Court of the Mint, and the City Communities, had Audience afterwards of his Majesty on the same Subject; each of their Principals being Speakers for the rest of their Bodies. In the Afternoon, the Grand Council, M. de Verthamont, First President, being Speaker, and the University, were admitted to compliment the King on his Majority, as were likewise the French Academy, at the Head of which, the Abbé Mongin Director, made an eloquent Speech. The same Day in the Afternoon, the Duke de Gèvres, Governour of Paris, presented to the King the Guards of the Six Bodies of Merchants of this City; his Majesty gave them a favourable Reception. The 24th in the Evening, the King went to see the Dutchess Dowager of Bourbon, the Princess of Conti Second Dowager, the Princess of Conti, and the Dutchess du Maine, on Occasion of the Death of the Princess Dowager of Conti: His Majesty also visited on the same Occasion, the Dutchess of Brunswick-Hanover. The 25th in the Afternoon, the King set out from the Tuilleries for Versailles, and arrived there in the Evening at Five a Clock. There is not the least Change made in the Government by the King's Majority. The Duke of Orleans has still the whole Administration of Affairs; his Royal Highness did not accompany the King when he returned to Versailles the 25th Instant; 'tis believed his Majesty will not come again to this City till next Whitson-tide to summon a Chapter, and create new Knights of the Holy Ghost. The King's Household Officers and Detachments of the Guards du Corps that conducted Mademoiselle de Beaujolois to the Spanish Frontiers, are expected hither the 14th of next Month. It is assured, that the three exiled Noblemen have received Letters de Cachet since the Majority, commanding them not to stir from their Exile till further Orders.

Anne, Palatine of Bavaria, Princess Dowager of Condé, died in this City the 23d Instant, between Twelve and One a Clock at Noon, in the 75th Year of her Age, almost compleated, being born the 13th of March 1648. This Princess, equally recommendable by her Vertues and Piety, as by her high Birth, was youngest Daughter of Edward Prince Palatine, Brother of Charles-Lewis Elector Palatine, and Anne of Gonzague-Cleves. She was married December the 11th 1663, to Henry-Julius de Bourbon, Third of that Name, Prince of Condé, First Prince of the Blood, and Grand Master of France, who died April 1, 1709. The 25th, the Abbé d'Hauteville was admitted Member of the French Academy, in the Place vacant by the Death of the late Abbé de Massieu: He made a Speech to the Academy, thanking them for his Admission; which was answered by the Director M. Mongin; both of them delivered themselves with extraordinary Eloquence. The 24th, Father Porée a Jesuit, one of the Rhetorick Professours in the College of Lewis the Great, made a very fine Latin Speech on the Subject of the King's Majority, in Presence of the Cardinals de Rohan, de Bisly, the Pope's Nuncio, several Archbishops and Bishops, and a great Number of Persons of Distinction. The Sale of the rich Mississippian Effects is still continued, and many Purchasers pay down ready Money, and not liquidated Effects. The Actions are about 1400 Livres; and Liquidations at 20.
